New Map of Addison County.

HENRY F. WALLING, State Engineer of Massachusetts and Rhode Island, is now engaged in the preparation of a large and accurate map of Addison County, Vermont, and, in connection with that work proposes to prepare a Map of Addison County from careful instrumental surveys throughout the entire county, to be completed and published as soon as is compatible with accuracy.

Every road to be carefully surveyed by course and distance, and the locations noted of all the hills, ponds, marshes, streams, mills, churches, school-houses, stores, work-shops, dwelling-houses, and other buildings or localities of interest and interest. Large plots to be added in the vicinity of all the principal villages in the county, on a large scale, so as to show every building distinctly. Names of property owners to be inserted throughout the map in their proper places. A statistical table of distances, roads, and distances, and the location of colored Geological Map, showing the different formations of rock and mineral throughout the county; and containing information of great value to agriculturists and others. The map will be handsomely colored and mounted, and furnished to subscribers for $5 per copy.

As parties from Philadelphia are about the county, publishing county maps from mere eye sketches, and entitled to no confidence as accurate topographical maps, all citizens interested in the matter are cautioned not to subscribe to them, or to buy any map unless they are assured that it is better than what is represented, and, as in many places, great misrepresentations have been made, the statements of irresponsible persons should not be received without sufficient evidence.

Apple Trees.

The subscribers have 5000 Apple Trees for sale, consisting of the best varieties for the climate, which have been thoroughly cultivated with the spade so as to be thrifty and well filled with fibrous roots—grown without manure, have not been trained by the aid of stakes, and able to stand alone when transplanted, also a large number of smaller trees. Those wanting low trees can have them of large size (no bearing) which by grafting on the ground will produce fruit in the winter, and the new grafted old trees, and may be trained according to your master's fancy.

Those will be sold very low to those who will take them at the nursery.

Apply to Jarvis Hoag, at the nursery in Starksborough, or the subscriber in Burlington.

C. GOODRICH.

17th Apple Trees may be safely transplanted in the Fall in dry sandy soil—but if wet heavy soils, it must be done in the Spring. But all who want trees next Spring had best set them this Fall before frozen in, and then bury the roots in the dry soil and cover them with Pine or Hemlock boughs. Late autumn is the best time for transporting them—borders—they will be on and for early Spring planting, and in fine order.
